Diseases of the Stomach Can Be Cured By

ACUTE INDIGESTION

Many People in the City Suffering From Disease-Some Advice.

Acute indigestion is generally caused from neglect of the system. A person overloads his or her stomach. With an overloaded stomach not working properly and the next meal as large as the preceding one. the contents of the stomach will ferment, affecting the entire system. This state of affairs is continued for some few days until the rictim is overcome with dizzy sensations and fever. This soon affects the heart which may in time cause congestion of the brain or any of the other organs of the body. Proper care of the body will in many cases cure the person affected. Few cases are fatal unless let go too long.

Acute indigestion which is easily curable, if neglected assumes the chronic form which so often resists all ordinary treatment. If you have chronic indigestion or dyspepsia you will have souring of the food, with a bad taste in the mouth, heartburn or pain in the region of the heart, hot, dry feeling in the stomach and mouth after eating, pain or tenderness at the pit of the stomach, a disposition to vomit, belching of gas after eating, eructations of sour or bitter, in other cases tasteless water, with fragments of food, rumbling noise in the bowels, a variable appetite, sometimes voracious, and at other times none at all, pain and tenderness in the right side along the short. ribs, numbness or pain in the right arm near the shoulder blade, or between the shoulder and the spine, obstinate constipation, chilliness nausea, and vomiting of bilious matter, tongue coated, pain across the temples and forehead, sense of oppression and tenderness in the region of the stomach and liver, duliness and languor, pain across eyes, Burning sensation in the stomach, a morbid fear of death, or an indescribable feeling of despondency, a sensation of weight, uneasiness, and fullness of the stomach, loss of appetite, drowsiness and frightful dreams, The patient usually shows the effect of the disease in the disposition, becoming "cranky," distrustful, and unhappy, prone to get "the blues," and to look on the lonesome and sad side of everything. These conditions are favorable to the development of many diseases and serious disorders are often the final result. The entire body depends for its nourishment upon the digestive organs and it is not to be wondered at that when they become diseased it affects the whole system, ruins health and shortens life. My eased it affects the trible class of diseases, and the introduction of new medicines and scientific methods of treatment enables me to cure medicines and scientific diseases who had thought their cases to be hopeless after having sought help both from the general practitioner and patent medicines without benefit. my treatment soothes, quiets and heals the inflamed and diseased lining of the stomach, and the various organs are restored to their lining of the stomach, mition. The entire body experiences new life and vigor, the tongue becomes clean, the sleep becomes calm and reand vigor, the tongs, the complexion clears up, the disposition becomes cheerful and hopeful once more, the pain and tenderness in the stomach and and hopeful once incre, the bowels become regular and the patient under the rios disappears, the pursuit of his usual work or avoca-
